

SUMMARY of “Googling” self:

Identities	Channels	Content
Anna Khamsamran	Facebook	liberal, global warming, poodles, Thailand, NCM
Anna Khamsamran	Twitter, Instagram	postings from Instagram-images of poodles, family, food, landscapes
Anna Khamsamran	LinkedIn	COO NCM, attending Deep Dive Coding Bootcamp, teaching, diving, management, non-profits, microsoft office, etc, interest in midwifery
Anna Khamsamran	www.midwiferycollege.org	Website designer
Anna Khamsamran	YouTube	Orientation Videos for NCM
Anna Khamsamran	StackOverflow	member
Anna Khamsamran	Google+
Anna Khamsamran	MANA.com	speaker at a conference
Anna Khamsamran	m2mi.org	site owner-teaching tips for midwifery instructors
Anna Khamsamran	diveindeep.com	dive center owner, Thailand
Anna Khamsamran	Act Blue	donated to politicians (political slant very evident)
Anna Depperman	padi	padi diving instructor

Reflections:

I am quite visible on Google, with many results, mostly in the name of Anna Khamsamran. I have the benefit-disadvantage of having a VERY unique name. I may be the only person in the world with this name. This means that it is quite easy to tell which Anna Khamsamran the Google hits are for.

Things that are unfortunately obvious: My political leanings/likes/dislikes.

Things that don't matter: that I have poodles

Many of my google hits are related to my work at the National College of Midwifery. I feel like I need to work on getting more content up about design and coding, rather than management and education.